Major Academic Medical Center Installs Black Diamond Video's Integrated Digital Surgical Suites (IDSS)

Alameda, California. November 9, 2009 – Black Diamond Video, Inc. (BDV) announces that Duke University Medical Center has selected BDV to install its state-of-the-art Integrated Digital Surgical Suites (IDSS) into the hospital's new hybrid OR/catheterization lab and four new cardiovascular surgical suites.

BDV's IDSS provides hospitals with an all-digital video-processing framework that is scalable, future-proof, and unrivaled in video quality and resolution. All of the IDSS' sophisticated features may be easily controlled via a user-friendly touch panel interface. The high-resolution digital media content that the IDSS produces may be efficiently managed through a central repository and easily streamed to Duke University Medical Center's pathology and conference rooms. Black Diamond pairs this cutting-edge technology with unmatched levels of service, support, and training. Ed Priest, Founder and CEO of BDV, noted: "Black Diamond Video has the advantage of both manufacturing and installing our own integrated audio and video solutions. This comprehensive knowledge of our technology and its applications allows us to provide superior service, support, and reliability to all of our clients."
